2. 2026-02-17 16:45 | Yahoo | NVIDIA (NVDA) rading 41% Below Analyst argets After Recent Drop

*NVIDIA (NASDAQ:NVDA) is down 4% over the past week. That's a sharper drop than the broader market's 2.21% decline and more than double the semiconductor sector's 1.07% pullback measured by the VanEck Semiconductor ETF. Yet Wall Street analysts maintain an average price target of $253.88, implying 41% upside from current levels. That's a massive gap ... ### Summary

AMD rose 0.67% to $207.32 on Feb 13 (volume 26.1M), trading near the low end of its 20■day range (position 0.14 between $205.94–$216.00). Provided headlines show a weak backdrop for the sector — the Nasdaq/QQQ hit a 12■week low with semiconductors leading the decline. Other summaries highlight an “AI scare trade” pressuring tech names and note NVIDIA’s recent pullback versus analyst targets, signaling industry headwinds that could pressure peers. Those sector-level stories describe a bearish environment but do not specifically explain AMD’s modest uptick. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Watch next: AMD earnings/guidance, product cadence (CPU/GPU/AI chips) and industry AI demand trends or regulatory updates.

Summary

AMZN closed down 0.41% from $199.60 to $198.79 on Feb 13, trading at the 20-day range low (position 0.00). Two ChartMill headlines flag the most active S&P 500 stocks in the session but give no Amazon-specific news or company developments. A Yahoo piece highlights Walmart crossing a $1 trillion market cap, which pertains to a peer but does not provide direct catalysts for Amazon. None of the provided summaries mention Amazon earnings, AWS, Prime/retail activity, product news, or regulatory actions. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Watch next: Amazon earnings and guidance, AWS results and cloud commentary, retail/Prime sales updates, and any regulatory or antitrust developments.

Summary

ASML closed 1406.61 on 2026-02-13, down 0.02% from 1406.87 and sitting at the 20■day range low (position 0.00) on volume of 1,249,325. Recent headlines note bullish analyst sentiment after ASML's fiscal Q4 2025 results (Jan. 28), when the company topped revenue estimates and reported strong bookings growth, and that Barclays recently upgraded the stock. Another piece highlights strong recent share-price momentum and a large 90■day/1■year total return, prompting valuation reassessments. Despite that positive backdrop, the tiny intraday move and placement at the 20■day low aren't clearly explained by the provided items. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Watch next: upcoming earnings, bookings updates and company guidance.

Summary

GOOGL fell 1.06%, from 309.00 to 305.72 on Feb 13, trading ~38.5M shares and closing at the 20-day range low (position 0.00). None of the provided headlines directly reference Alphabet/Google — the ChartMill item simply lists most active S&P 500 names without identifying GOOGL. The other summaries cover Walmart's market cap milestone and an investor buying a Goldman Sachs Nasdaq-100 income ETF, neither of which discusses Google's business, products, earnings, or regulation. Because the supplied summaries don't address company-specific developments, they do not explain the move. No clear catalyst found in provided news. ## Summary

META slid 1.55% from 649.81 to 639.77 on Feb 13, closing at the 20-day range low (position 0.00) on volume of 12,336,363. The only directly relevant item in the provided feed is a report that Spain has asked prosecutors to probe X, Meta and TikTok over dissemination of AI-generated images and potential crimes against minors — a development that would bear on Meta's regulatory and content moderation risk. That headline could plausibly weigh on sentiment around the stock, but the provided article is dated later than the Feb 12–13 move, so timing makes a causal link unclear. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Watch next: regulatory developments around AI-generated content and any company commentary or enforcement actions in Spain, plus upcoming earnings/guidance and product/content moderation updates.

Summary

NVDA fell 2.21% from 186.94 to 182.81 on Feb 13, landing at the 20-day range low (position 0.00) on volume of about 161.9M shares. The supplied headlines are general market pieces from ChartMill highlighting "most active" S&P500 stocks and "stocks making the most noise" but do not provide NVDA-specific business, product, earnings, or regulatory news. A Yahoo piece about an iShares income ETF is unrelated to NVIDIA's operations or outlook. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Given the lack of company-specific coverage, the reason for the pullback is uncertain. Watch next: earnings/guidance, product announcements, and regulatory or industry developments.

Summary

TSM slipped 0.47% from $368.10 to $366.36 on Feb 13, trading about 10.47M shares and sitting around 0.59 of its 20-day range ($355.41–$374.09). Headlines provided include DA Davidson initiating coverage of TSM with a Buy (Fintel), which would typically be supportive for the stock. Other items: a Seeking Alpha headline on Nvidia's "Robust Growth Outlook With Minimal Supply Disruption Risk" could be relevant to TSM as a major foundry supplier, but the article summary is missing; a Technology Dashboard/BCTK ETF piece offer no clear TSM-specific detail. No clear catalyst found in provided news. Watch next: TSMC earnings and guidance, major customer demand trends (e.g., Nvidia), and capacity/industry demand updates.
